DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Mori et al. [US 2002/0112924 A1] in view of Chen et al. [US 6,331,744 B1].

Mori et al. discloses an inductive power coupler [figure 2] for an elevator, comprising:

a primary; and

a secondary separated from said primary by an air gap, wherein the primary and secondary each having a thin ferrite core with a coil wrapped around the core and each of the cores having a width extending outwardly from the corresponding coil.

Mori et al. discloses the instant claimed invention except for the specific dimensions of the cores relative to the air gap.

Chen et al. teaches a contact-less energy transfer system and the advantageous to adjust the magnetic field based on the winding turns and size based on air gap. Chen et al. states that the maximum magnetic field can be varied based on the turns or transmitter/receiver shape.

Art Unit: 2832

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skilled in the art at the time the invention was made to use the teaching of adjusting magnetic field of Chen et al. in the contactless system of Mori et al. for the purpose of adjusting and improving magnetic field.

Regarding claims 2-3, the specific dimensions would have been an obvious design consideration based on the intended applications/environments uses.
